Sky Mart will be the first OEM aerospace fluids & parts distributor to stock Jet Oil 387, ExxonMobil's High Performance Capability (HPC) Aircraft Type Gas Turbine Lubricant

Mobil Jet Oil 387 is ExxonMobil's most advanced synthetic turbine oil. It has been developed for use in civilian, military, marine and industrial gas turbine engines, including turbo jets, fans, propellers, and shafts (rotary wing).

Combining the best performance characteristics of HTS and Standard Type II oils, Jet Oil 387 has performed exceptionally in various laboratory tests in controlling deposition in bearing compartments, oil supply lines, and breather/scavenger lines in both the liquid and vapor phases. Besides deposition, Jet Oil 387 counters deterioration.

Jet Oil 387 complies with the SAE AS5780 HPC civil aviation standard, which is geared toward new, higher-output and lower-consumption engines.

OEM evaluations are in progress. Rolls-Royce and GE have already approved the use of Jet Oil 387 in their gas turbines.

Mobil Jet Oil 387

- × Premature or unscheduled engine repairs
- × Aircraft uptime delays and cancellations due to leaks
- × Formation of sludge and carbon deposits, costly engine repairs, shorter oil drain intervals (marine and ground turbines), and ineffective lubrication at high operating temperatures
- × Increased engine maintenance costs due to deposition in air vent tubes, bearing compartments, and scavenge oil lines
- × Delayed start-ups and ineffective lubrication of critical components (e.g. APUs in ETOPS applications) at temperatures as low as -40°F/-40°C
